

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

LV.

A thousand times I have repented
Of having more than needful vented ;
But ne'er of danger knew a tittle
To come from having said too little.

LVI.

'Tis noised abroad, where'er one goes,
And I am fain to hear,
That no one in the country knows
The girl to me most dear :
And, 'tis so true, that scarce I wot,
If I love one at all or not.

* * *

DAVID GAM *.

My countryman of olden days,
Bold David Gam, demands my lays :
He, who on the Gallic plain
Rests among the valiant slain,—
He, who fills a Hero's grave,
Oh he—the bravest of the brave !

When Monmouth's Harry o'er the main
To battle France led forth his train,
Of bearing bright and gallant mien
The 'Squire bold David Gam was seen,
Proud Chivalry's undaunted son
As e'er the heart of Beauty won !

'Twas near the tow'rs of Agincourt,
Where mad Bellona rul'd the sport,
The Monarch sent his Herald out,
The foe to number, weak and stout ;
And he a tale of terror told,
It's breathing chill'd both faint and bold.

* Davydd Gam was a native of South Wales, and contemporary with the celebrated Owain Glyndwr, to whom he proved a formidable opponent during the reign of the fourth Henry. The gallant part he acted under his son in the famous battle of Agincourt is faithfully related in this well written ballad, with the exception that he died in the defence of his Sovereign, while his person was in great danger, and for which he received in his last moments, as here noticed, the honour of knighthood.—ED.

" The foes are like the stars of night !
 " Their number such, their arms as bright.
 " The foes are like the northern wind—
 " Of strength too vast to be defin'd !
 " Our doom is, if their rage we face,
 " Despair, discomfiture, disgrace !"

Bold Gam, he told another tale :—
 " I've mark'd the foe on hill and dale ;
 " There is enough—and that is all ;
 " Enough to fight, enough to fall,
 " Enough to grace our triumph gay,
 " And full enough to run away !"

The Cambrian warrior's story brave
 To cooling bosoms ardour gave—
 On they rush'd and charg'd : how well
 The fame of Agincourt can tell ;
 Where bleeding on the field of fight
 The dying Gam was dubb'd a Knight.

My countryman of olden days,
 Bold David Gam, demands my lays ;
 He, who on the Gallic plain
 Rests among the valiant slain ;
 He, who fills a warrior's grave,
 Oh he—the bravest of the brave !

JEFFREY LLEWELYN.

IMPROMPTU

On the BIRTH of an HEIR to the HOUSE of WYNNSTAY,
 May 22, 1820.

Welcome, stranger, to our land,
 Welcome to each hill and vale,
 Where the sons of Cymru stand,
 Eager thy approach to hail.

Joy and gladness for thee wait,
 Honour too and love attend :
 In return, be this thy fate,
 Ever live old Cymru's friend.

* * *